1. Negotiations between the various interested syndicates and the Mene Grande Oil Company, S.A., which took place on [REDACTED], were distinguished 25X1A from prior meetings with the Shell Group Companies and Creole Petroleum Corporation by the presence of representatives of two black Communist unions and those of the three green Social Christian syndicates (COPEI). COSUTRAPET (red Communist federation) and the Comité Pro Federacion Sindical Nacional Petrolera or Comité (blue-white Accion Democratica grouping) were again the leaders of the discussions. The Asociacion Nacional de Empleados (ANDE) of Zulia again appeared on its own behalf.

Because of objections made by other union groups, they withdrew 25X1A from the talks and began meetings with the company alone on [REDACTED]. Unions represented by them, together with the number of member employees of Mene Grande as of 1 January 1950, are as follows:

Sindicato de Trabajadores y Obreros Petroleros (STOP) del Distrito Sotillo (Puerto La Cruz)	69

Comments:

*It will be noted that the black Communist unions had their own representatives and did not associate themselves with the URD union nor with CISPEN. This would appear to indicate that the two groups decided to appear separately; that their expected joinder did not culminate or else proved unsatisfactory; or that the early estimate of their cooperation by Creole Petroleum Corporation officials was faulty.

**Former Accion Democratica unions are known as blue in the western oil fields and as white in eastern Venezuela.

***UVOMM was called a blue syndicate by Shell Group Companies, and a Sindicato UVOMM was called red by Creole Petroleum Corporation.
